Saint Louis University & the John Cook School of Business

Saint Louis University is a Jesuit, Catholic university ranked among the top research institutions in the nation. Founded in 1818, it is the oldest university west of the Mississippi and the second oldest Jesuit university in the United States, while the John Cook School of Business is one of several colleges and schools that make up the University campus. Founded in 1910 and an accredited member of the Association to Advance Collegiate Schools of Business (AACSB-International) since 1946, it is the 15th oldest business school in the nation with a mission dedicated to excellence in business education.

The Cook School offers undergraduate degrees in Business Administration and graduate-level education through both a full-time and professional part-time MBA, a Master of Science in Finance, a Master of Accounting, an Executive Master of International Business and a Ph.D. in Business Administration, which focuses on research and preparation for academic careers.

Additionally, the school has several Centers of Distinction, which serve to bridge academic experience with the real-world and expand student horizons beyond the classroom. By offering programs as well as workshops and seminars with various experts, the centers not only contribute to the comprehensive education of its business students, but also provide invaluable learning opportunities for the business and professional community. They include the Executive Education Program, the Boeing Institute of International Business, the Consortium for Supply Chain Management, the Smurfit Stone Center for Entrepreneurship, the Emerson Ethics Center, Service Leadership, the Simon Center for Regional Economic Forecasting, and Advancing Women in Leadership Programs.

The Executive Education Program & ASPE, Inc. Partnership

The Executive Education Program at the John Cook School of Business provides on-going, professional training for managers and business and organizational leaders. It affords participants the latest tools, concepts, and decision-making skills for improvement and enhancement of their approach to business and organizational challenges in order to achieve effective real-world results today and in the future. It has partnered with ASPE, a national and valued leader in professional training and development of hands-on, real-world courses in technical business analysis and software design, to offer two Executive Certificate Programs in Business Analysis and Agile Methods. Through this partnership, professionals will be provided the latest managerial knowledge and skills training to make them more effective leaders, empowering their companies and organizations to gain critical competitive advantage in an increasingly fluid and energetic environment.
